14 Killed, 7 Hurt in Blast Aboard Salvage Ship

2 DEEP SEA DIVERS ARE AMONG DEAD

ITALIAN SHIP ARTIGLIO HAD LOCATED A SUNKEN TREASURE SHIP

FORTUNE IN GOLD WAS ABOUT TO BE TAKEN FROM THE DEPTHS OF SEA

Belle Isle, France, Dec. 8.—(U.P.)—The Italian salvage ship Artiglio, nearing success in an effort to retrieve some $8,000,000 gold treasure from the sunken liner Egypt, was sunk yesterday by a deep sea explosion during operations to remove wreckage of another ship, the steamer Florence.

Fourteen members of the crew of the Artiglio were lost and seven others injured. Winter storms had forced the Artiglio to cease temporarily its efforts to salvage the gold treasure and it had contracted with the French government to remove wreckage of the Florence, which was loaded with munitions when sunk eight miles off Belle Island in 1918.

The Florence was supposed to have 400 tons of munitions in its hold when it crossed the Atlantic ocean from America to France in 1918. It was charged that unknown persons had placed a time bomb aboard the ship, set to explode when the vessel reached L'Orient. As a result it was sunk off Belle Island.

"I don't know how it happened," the chief mechanic of the Artiglio, who was injured, told the United Press. "Three divers had gone down yesterday and placed four mines under the Florence, which lay in the traffic channel between Quiberon and the Island of Houat.

"When they reappeared on the surface the signal was given. Then the surface of the sea seemed to spurt into the air. The Artiglio sank with rocket-like swiftness. I was thrown clear into the water and picked up by the crew of the policeboat Rostro, which was working about three miles away and heard the explosion.

The injured members of the crew, several gravely hurt, were brought here.

The dead included Captain Jacques Bertelotti of the Artiglio, Chief Diver Alberto Gianni, one of the men who located the treasure ship Egypt after months of search on the bottom of the ocean, and Second Diver Franceschi.

Authorities here were not sure from the story of the survivors as to the exact cause of the sinking of the Artiglio. They expressed the opinion, however, that a premature blast of explosives used in removing the wreckage of the Florence had occurred.

The police vessel Rostro was attracted to the scene by the explosion and saved the seven men who were brought here. The bodies of the two deep sea divers who had risked their lives repeatedly in the salvage operations were recovered.

The S. S. Egypt, sailing from London for India in 1922, had a vast cargo of gold in her holds. She was rammed in dense fog off the French coast and sank, with a loss of about 100 lives.

The Florence lay at the bottom of a channel off the west coast of France in the Bay of Biscay.

The sinking was believed to end attempts to raise the Egypt, as the Artiglio was equipped especially for the purpose.

The Italian salvage crew appeared optimistic regarding their eventual success when rough weather forced them to abandon work above the Egypt last fall.

It was learned that a run started on the bank several days ago. A number of prominent film figures withdrew accounts Saturday.

In recent years much of his work has been in detection and arrest of counterfeiting gangs.

EXECUTION OF 5 CONDEMNED BY SOVIET COMMUNITED

5 PROFESSORS FOUND GUILTY OF A COUNTER-REVOLUTION PLOT

ONLY HOPE FOR REPRIEVE LIES IN APPEAL TO CENTRAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

By EUGENE LYONS (United Press Staff Correspondent)

Moscow, Dec. 8.—(U.P.)—The death sentences imposed yesterday on five Russian technicians, accused of plotting with foreign powers for a war of intervention on Russia, were commuted today by the Zik (central executive committee of the Soviet Union—equivalent to the parliament of other countries).

The death sentences were commuted to ten years' imprisonment. The three accused men, who had been sentenced to ten years' imprisonment, were given commutation to five years' imprisonment.

In extending clemency, the Zik said the proletarian state does not desire vengeance on beaten and disarmed enemies.

Moscow, Dec. 8.—The execution of five professors condemned to death for counter-revolution will be strictly private, and will be announced after the verdict of the judges has been carried out, it was announced today.

The only hope of reprieve for the condemned men lay in appeal to the central executive committee of the Soviet Union. On the basis of the rapidity of the execution of sentence in previous counter-revolutionary trials, the five defendants had a maximum of 72 hours in which the central committee might intervene.

Those who escaped the death penalty were sentenced to ten years' imprisonment and will be deprived of all civic rights for five years after their terms are served.

A packed court howled approval of the sentences for 10 minutes.

The men sentenced to death are Leonid Ramin, head of the All-Union Heating Institute; Victor Larichev, member of the state planning commission; Ivan Kalinikov, member of the state planning commission; Nikolai Charnovsky, vice-president of the Techno-Scientific society and Alexander Fedotov, head of the Textile Institute.

Sergei Kuprianov, head of the textile division of the supreme economic council; Vladimir Ochkin, head of the scientific research sector of the council; and Xenophon Sitnin, member of the textile syndicate, were sentenced to prison.

All property of the condemned men will be confiscated, as is usual in Soviet counter-revolutionary verdicts.

The judges' verdict, written in long hand by Chief Judge Vishinsky in accordance with Soviet law, carefully avoided the outright mention of foreign governments, contenting itself with harsh references to the activities of "leading foreign capitalistic and military circles," "French agents" and similar expressions.

However, in recounting how the conspirators planned "to overthrow the Soviet government by armed intervention and establish a military dictatorship," the verdict designated France as the alleged leader, with Poland, Rumania and other frontier countries participating.

There were references to "British capitalism," but the British government was not mentioned.

The verdict mentioned specifically Gen. Janin, and Col. Joinville and Col. Richard, identified by the defendants as French and British officers. Messieurs "K" and "E," named in the trial as French agents, were mentioned in the verdict, but their identity was not revealed.

The men sentenced to death stood in the prisoners' box in the great red-draped hall, formerly a noble's ballroom, and heard the sentence pronounced when the men regarded as the leaders of the counter-revolutionary forces were sentenced. A crowd of 3,000, hushed as Vishinsky began to read the judges' findings, broke into wild cheering, shouted upon them without flinching of the interventionist plot were told that they must die.

Pierre Laval, Independent Socialist and Minister of Labor, Asked to Form a Cabinet

LOUIS BARTHOU FAILS IN TASK ASSIGNED HIM

BARTHOU BLOCKED BY RADICAL AND RADICAL-SOCIALIST GROUPS

LAVAL NOT REGARDED AS OUTSTANDING CHOICE FOR FRENCH PREMIER

Paris, Dec. 8.—(U.P.)—President Gaston Doumergue invited Senator Pierre Laval, independent socialist and minister of labor in the Tardieu government, to form a cabinet today.

The invitation followed the failure of Senator Louis Barthou to accomplish the task. Barthou, a former premier, was blocked by the decision of the radical and radical-socialist groups not to support a cabinet including a member of the republican-democratic union.

Laval was not regarded as an outstanding choice for premier, but according to French political custom several senators will be given the opportunity to form a government, for it was in the senate that the Tardieu ministry was overthrown.

Laval accepted the president's invitation and conversed immediately with Aristide Briand, Raymond Poincare and Tardieu. He will report to President Doumergue Tuesday morning.

RESCUES DROWNING BOY AS HE CRAWLS OVER RUBBER ICE

Minneapolis, Dec. 8.—(U.P.)—Crawling inch by inch over rubber ice that cracked and sagged with his weight, A. B. Larson, oil station employee, rescued a drowning boy from the Mississippi river today.

Larson saw the boy, Otto Bembs, 8, clinging to the thin ice 30 feet from shore. He shouted to the lad to hang on and wriggled carefully toward him. By the time he reached Bembs, the boy was so weak he could not aid Larson in the rescue.

Neither the boy nor his rescuer suffered any ill effects, though both were drenched in the icy water.

BLIND MAN LOSES CHRISTMAS SAVINGS

St. Louis, Dec. 8.—(U.P.)—Thomas Oster, 29-year-old blind man, today hoped for the return of $25 which he had saved during the year to give his family a merry Christmas.

Oster put fifty cents weekly in the bank during the year and Saturday drew it out preparatory to buying presents for his wife and child. Before he had gone two blocks from the bank the blind man discovered he had lost his savings.

$1,600 SHORTAGE IN STATE BOXING BODY CHARGED

A. R. JOHNSON, CHIEF STATE PUBLIC EXAMINER, FILES HIS REPORT

OTHER DISCREPANCIES ALSO NOTED IN THE COMMISSION'S BOOKS

St. Paul, Minn., Dec. 8.—(U.P.)—A $1,600 shortage in state boxing commission funds was charged today by A. R. Johnson, chief state public examiner.

Johnson said that other discrepancies were found in the commission books but were not included in the report due to lack of definite evidence. The shortages were blamed to E. A. Danz, former secretary of the commission, who refused to answer questions on advice of his attorney.

Copies of the report were placed in the hands of commission members, Danz, Governor Theodore Christianson and County Attorney C. O. O'Brien.

The report alleged that a savings account was kept in Danz' name in 1928-29 in which deposits of $15 or multiples of that figure were made. Johnson pointed out that the fee for "amateur" bouts was $15.

"Amateur" fees were received by Danz and not recorded in boxing commission books, Johnson said.

COMPANIONATE MARRIAGE CONTROVERSY

BETWEEN BISHOP MANNING AND JUDGE LINDSEY IN MAGISTRATE'S COURT

DENVER JURIST WAS FORCIBLY EJECTED FROM CATHEDRAL OF ST. JOHN THE DIVINE

New York, Dec. 8.—(U.P.)—The companionate marriage controversy between Bishop William T. Manning and Judge Ben E. Lindsey wound up in a magistrate's court today after the Denver jurist had been forcibly ejected from the Cathedral of St. John the Divine for interrupting the Sunday morning services.

After a week of strong verbal exchanges, which began with the bishop's unsuccessful protest against a speech Lindsey made to a group of clergymen, the two men faced each other before a large congregation in the church yesterday. Bishop Manning had announced he would speak about Lindsey, and the jurist had intimated he might challenge the sermon.

As Manning closed his sermon assailing the companionate marriage theories, and was intoning the ascription, Lindsey leaped to an oak table directly below the pulpit, raised his arms in a denunciatory gesture and shouted:

"Bishop Manning, you have done me an injustice. I demand five minutes to answer your lies. This is not a house of God but a house of injustice."

Before he could continue several ushers and detectives rushed forward, dragged him from the table and amid wild confusion, hustled him outside. He was taken to a district police station and served with a formal summons charging disorderly conduct. No bond was required and he was thus able to keep a lecture engagement in Albany. He returned from Albany to answer the summons this morning.

The bishop's sermon, which unsparingly attacked Lindsey's idea, was precipitated by an invitation to Lindsey by the New York Churchmen's Association, a sort of unofficial club of Protestant Episcopal rectors of the diocese, to explain his views on companionate marriage. Bishop Manning asked the association to withdraw its invitation. The Churchmen announced they would hear Lindsey, though in private session.

"Companionate marriage is only a legalized name for free love," said Bishop Manning. "According to Judge Lindsey's proposal, a young man and a young woman are to live together and their union is to continue if they prefer, the coming of children is to be prevented with the help of contraceptives and if they have no children their union is to be discontinued at any time they may so desire, or may wish to form some fresh alliance. If that is not free love, what is it? Would any man among us consider it a debatable question whether his daughter should enter into such a union as that, and if not, how can it be a debatable question whether the daughters of others should enter into such unions?"

The bishop then reviewed the charges under which Lindsey was disbarred in Colorado, which the former jurist has maintained were "framed" because of his liberal views.

TWO DULUTH MEN CHARGED WITH PAYING IN FORGED CHECKS

Minneapolis, Dec. 8.—(U.P.)—Two Duluth men, charged with paying $1,200 in forged checks, were arrested today.

One gave the name of Frank Moran, but police said he had been positively identified as Roland Granger, athletic director at Vocational high, Duluth. The other said he was Glenn Chase, barber.

The pair were arrested at a hotel where police said they found a supply of blank checks, printed to duplicate checks used by several business firms.

The blank checks were similar to a number alleged to have been passed by the men. The checks were believed to have been printed in the school print shop.

BOTH HOUSES AND PRESIDENT IN ARGUMENT

HOUSE AND SENATE DIVIDED AGAINST EACH OTHER ON PROPOSITION

BOTH REJECT THE PROGRAM OFFERED BY MR. HOOVER

By LYLE C. WILSON (United Press Staff Correspondent)

Washington, Dec. 8.—Both houses of congress and President Hoover are arrayed against each other today in a three-way dispute as the house and senate prepared to deal with the first relief bills of the short session.

The house and senate are divided against each other on drought relief and both have rejected the program offered by Mr. Hoover. The president is alarmed by the congressional tendency toward greater relief appropriations than he considers necessary. Majority Leader Watson of the senate heard Mr. Hoover speak his mind on the matter in a week-end White House conference in which the president warned excessive spending would increase the deficit and, in general, be disastrous.

Democrats contend a deficit greater than the $180,000,000 forecast by the treasury would be disastrous only to Mr. Hoover and the republican party rather than to the country as a whole.

Senate republicans are siding with the democrats to make the drought relief appropriation $60,000,000 instead of the $25,000,000 sought by Mr. Hoover. The agricultural committee is attempting to get the $60,000,000 bill passed by the senate today. The house raised Mr. Hoover's figure only $5,000,000 to $30,000,000 and veteran legislators said the compromise probably would end with $45,000,000 made available for loans to farmers distressed by drought or storm.

House and senate are further divided on whether the fund should be available for loans to provide needy farmers with food. The senate committee decided it should and the house committee that it should not. Democratic strategy in the house is to wait for the senate bill to come over and place on republican representatives the burden of voting to reduce the appropriation below $60,000,000 and to exclude the food provision.

The house appropriations committee considered Mr. Hoover's request for $100,000,000 to $150,000,000 to be spent creating jobs and drafted a bill to be reported tomorrow which will fix the sum at $110,000,000. But the additional $40,000,000 may be added to other appropriation bills.

Important matters were being taken up in committee. The senate finance committee was holding hearings on Mr. Hoover's tariff commission selections and a house appropriations subcommittee called Prohibition Commissioner Woodcock for questioning about his desire for 500 more dry agents.

The postoffice and treasury appropriations, passed by the house, went to the senate appropriations committee.

The Nye campaign expenditures committee of the senate expects to report this week on the expenditures of Senator Davis, republican, Pennsylvania, and a contest over his seat may be precipitated.

Washington, Dec. 8.—Chairman McNary of the senate agriculture committee today favorably reported to the senate a bill to provide $60,000,000 for drought and storm distressed farmers. President Hoover had tried to limit the appropriation to $25,000,000.

Washington, Dec. 8.—Senator Walsh, democrat, Massachusetts, today condemned administration unemployment relief proposals and called on the democratic party to accept the mandate of the November 4 election by bringing in its own program of relief. He urged additional taxes on big incomes to finance a thorough relief project.

"We are no longer a minority party in this country," Walsh shouted.

Assailing the administration program because at most it could relieve only laborers, mechanics and artisans, Walsh demanded relief for "the so-called white collar class who will get little help from these proposals."

"Soup kitchens and free beds have their places as stop gap measures," he continued, "but what the unemployed want is not a dole. They want an opportunity to work."

"President Hoover's relief program is just a drop in the bucket. Persons in high places have grossly underestimated the number of the unemployed."

"It is hypocritical to talk about relief for the unemployed and at the same time to talk about minimizing expenditures. There should be more taxes for the rich. They got their money from the toil of the poor."

"I am sick and tired of the absence in high places of sympathy and appreciation of the problem," Walsh continued. "I protest in the names of millions of people who are looking for sympathy and appreciation of their plight."

"Those who have incomes of $50,000, $100,000 and $1,000,000 a year have got to meet the expense of this emergency. I call on these men with their fortunes for increased taxes."

TONY MAY DIES IN CHICAGO

IMMIGRANT BECAME KNOWN AS "THE MILLIONAIRE NEWSBOY"

Chicago, Dec. 8.—(U.P.)—Tony May, an immigrant who became known as "the millionaire newsboy," died today of injuries received when a powerful bomb, concealed in a box which he believed contained a birthday present, exploded in his hands.

May, who would have been 64 tomorrow, was fatally injured and his son, Eugene, 16, was seriously hurt, when urged by Eugene, the father decided to open his "birthday present," received by parcel post, ahead of time.

The box was delivered last Thursday. It was 13 inches long and 3 inches square. It bore the label of a mail order house. It was so arranged that when the lid was lifted the explosion was set off. The blast was so powerful it wrecked one room of the May home, blew the son through a door, and was heard several blocks away.

May's body and legs were badly mangled.

The impressive looking box interested Eugene and for several days he urged his father to open it. Finally, May consented to let Eugene open it for him. The explosion followed.

The house and senate are divided against each other on drought relief and both have rejected the program offered by Mr. Hoover. The president is alarmed by the congressional tendency toward greater relief appropriations than he considers necessary. Majority Leader Watson of the senate heard Mr. Hoover speak his mind on the matter in a week-end White House conference in which the president warned excessive spending would increase the deficit and, in general, be disastrous.

Democrats contend a deficit greater than the $180,000,000 forecast by the treasury would be disastrous only to Mr. Hoover and the republican party rather than to the country as a whole.

Senate republicans are siding with the democrats to make the drought relief appropriation $60,000,000 instead of the $25,000,000 sought by Mr. Hoover. The agricultural committee is attempting to get the $60,000,000 bill passed by the senate today. The house raised Mr. Hoover's figure only $5,000,000 to $30,000,000 and veteran legislators said the compromise probably would end with $45,000,000 made available for loans to farmers distressed by drought or storm.

House and senate are further divided on whether the fund should be available for loans to provide needy farmers with food. The senate committee decided it should and the house committee that it should not. Democratic strategy in the house is to wait for the senate bill to come over and place on republican representatives the burden of voting to reduce the appropriation below $60,000,000 and to exclude the food provision.

The house appropriations committee considered Mr. Hoover's request for $100,000,000 to $150,000,000 to be spent creating jobs and drafted a bill to be reported tomorrow which will fix the sum at $110,000,000. But the additional $10,000,000 may be added to other appropriation bills.

Important matters were being taken up in committee. The senate finance committee was holding hearings on Mr. Hoover's tariff commission selections and a house appropriations subcommittee called Prohibition Commissioner Woodcock for questioning about his desire for 500 more dry agents.

The postoffice and treasury appropriations, passed by the house, went to the senate appropriations committee.

The Nye campaign expenditures committee of the senate expects to report this week on the expenditures of Senator Davis, republican, Pennsylvania, and a contest over his seat may be precipitated.

Washington, Dec. 8.—Chairman McNary of the senate agriculture committee today favorably reported to the senate a bill to provide $60,000,000 for drought and storm distressed farmers. President Hoover had tried to limit the appropriation to $25,000,000.

Washington, Dec. 8.—Senator Walsh, democrat, Massachusetts, today condemned administration unemployment relief proposals and called on the democratic party to accept the mandate of the November 4 election by bringing in its own program of relief. He urged additional taxes on big incomes to finance a thorough relief project.

"We are no longer a minority party in this country," Walsh shouted.

Assailing the administration program because at most it could relieve only laborers, mechanics and artisans, Walsh demanded relief for the so-called white collar class who will get little help from these proposals.

"Soup kitchens and free beds have their places as stop gap measures," he continued, "but what the unemployed want is not a dole. They want an opportunity to work."

"President Hoover's relief program is just a drop in the bucket. Persons in high places have grossly underestimated the number of the unemployed."

"It is hypocritical to talk about relief for the unemployed and at the same time to talk about minimizing expenditures. There should be more taxes for the rich. They got their money from the toil of the poor."

"I am sick and tired of the absence in high places of sympathy and appreciation of the problem," Walsh continued. "I protest in the names of millions of people who are looking for sympathy and appreciation of their plight."

"Those who have incomes of $50,000, $100,000 and $1,000,000 a year have got to meet the expense of this emergency. I call on these men with their fortunes for increased taxes."

TWO DULUTH MEN CHARGED WITH PAYING IN FORGED CHECKS

Minneapolis, Dec. 8.—(U.P.)—Two Duluth men, charged with paying $1,200 in forged checks, were arrested today.

One gave the name of Frank Moran, but police said he had been positively identified as Roland Granger, athletic director at Vocational high, Duluth. The other said he was Glenn Chase, barber.

The pair were arrested at a hotel where police said they found a supply of blank checks, printed to duplicate checks used by several business firms.

The blank checks were similar to a number alleged to have been passed by the men. The checks were believed to have been printed in the school print shop.

JUNIOR HIGH NEED TO BE DISCUSSED

Whittier P. T. A. Will Take Up Topic at Meeting Tomorrow Evening

COBB TO GIVE VIEWS

"Y" Secretary on Speaking Program; Special Musical Numbers Arranged

The Whittier P. T. A. will hold an important meeting at the school at 8 o'clock tomorrow evening, at which time the need of a Junior high school in Brainerd will be further discussed, and all parents and friends are invited to attend.

Prof. W. C. Cobb will discuss the subject of "The Value of a Junior High School in Brainerd" from an educational point of view, and his talk will prove of interest to all parents in particular.

The association has also arranged for a talk by Capt. Ira L. Peterson, secretary of the Y. M. C. A. on "The Relationship of Parents, Community and Children." Mr. Peterson has studied the problems of youth and has been successful in boys' club work in Brainerd.

A fine musical program has also been arranged, which includes some of the city's most popular talent.

Soprano solos—Mrs. J. H. Krekelberg.
Violin solos—Miss Geraldine Klebler.
Baritone solos—A. C. Mraz.

A lunch will be served, Mrs. R. M. Sheets being in charge of the lunch committee.
At the October meeting, Dr. G. H. Ribbel, a member of the school board, gave the members of the association the following facts relative to the necessity of a Junior high school in Brainerd, from a physical point of view:

1. That in the four major grade schools there are comfortable accommodations for only 1,080 pupils, while there are enrolled at the present time 1,303, thus overcrowding by 223 pupils.
2. There is no room for kindergartens.
3. Some schools use basement rooms with poor lighting facilities, and unhealthy overhead heating.
4. That many teachers are compe-led to have more pupils in their rooms than the maximum number.

5. Inadequate library space, and no administrative offices for principals.
6. That by transferring the seventh, eighth grades and the first year high school students to the Junior high school, it would relieve the overcrowded conditions of the grade schools.

The above facts, with many others, were brought up to clearly show the necessity of a Junior high school for Brainerd.

To Entertain Alpha Class

H. L. Jones Retires as District Storekeeper; at Brainerd Since 1902

J. S. SEWALL, SUCCESSOR

Harry L. Jones, district storekeeper for the Northern Pacific at Brainerd, after a continuous service record of over 45 years has retired from active duty.

Mr. Jones first entered service in June, 1885, as a telegraph operator at Thompson Falls, Mont., serving successively in this capacity at Glyndon, Minn., and Fargo, N. D. Yes, weary miles and grinding miles—
That try the souls of men;
And makes one wonder if they'll end,
And, if so, where and when.

And yet, on rocky road with heavy load
That strained on knot and strand;
Full many times you've reached back

A willing, helping hand.

And with a grin, that raised our vim,
And a pat upon the shoulder;
You've bucked us up and cheered us up—
And made our spirits bolder.

But—as all things come to those who

In patience—while still striving—
Now you can lay the burden down,
And cease from Duty's driving.

America's Unprecedented Drought

A SUMMARY of the facts of "The Unprecedented Drought of the Summer of 1930" constitutes the greater part of the annual report of the Weather Bureau, which Secretary of Agriculture Hyde has made public. Nominally this report covers the fiscal year ending June 30, 1930, but C. F. Marvin, chief of the bureau, recognized the wide popular interest in the drought, and his statement includes the record of the drought to the end of August. A second section of the report deals with the expansion of weather forecasting in aid of aviation.

"Basing the statement on weather reports up to August 31," says Doctor Marvin, "we can say that the drought and heat wave are over, but reports for the remainder of the year will be required before a full history can be written.

"The central and eastern portions of the country have now passed through the most severe drought in the climatological history of the United States. By the first of September the drought had continued for nine months in the middle Atlantic area, six months over the Ohio and the middle Mississippi Valleys, and for shorter periods in nearly all other sections east of the Rocky Mountains. The middle Atlantic area was dry during the winter season. In March the drought extended westward over the Ohio and Middle Mississippi Valleys, and thence in other directions as the season progressed."

Not a single state east of the Rocky Mountains had as much as normal precipitation for the period of the three principal growing months (June, July and August) and some half dozen states had less than half the normal. Abnormally high temperatures greatly intensified the effect of the deficient moisture.

In the table showing deficiencies in precipitation, in percentages of normal, for the drought of 1930, by states and months, for the period continuously below normal, Minnesota records 5 for June, 20 for July and 67 for August and an average monthly deficiency of 34.

After summarizing the effects of the drought on the crops Doctor Marvin says that the river stages also show the extent and severity of the drought. "In the Missouri Basin above Pierre, S. D., and in that part of the upper Mississippi Basin above the Iowa-Minnesota line low river stages are not unusual for July and August, but in the remainder of the drainage area of the Mississippi River system, and on the Atlantic slope of Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia, and North Carolina the dry weather is plainly reflected in the low water stages. Many of the small streams in the Missouri Basin are dry, and in the remainder of the drought area all streams are either as low as they have ever been in August, or are very close to the low record. In North Carolina and in the territory drained by the southern tributaries of the Ohio, low States in 1925 appear to have been slightly lower than those prevailing in the present summer.

"Wells are failing, water for stock is scarce where comparatively large streams are not available, and the matter of sewage disposal in a few places is becoming acute. The hydro-electric plants on the large streams are not suffering, but on the smaller streams they have either shut down or are drawing rather heavily on their reserves. Navigation on the controlled rivers is not interrupted, but on the Mississippi, especially north of Cairo, the low water has made it necessary to materially decrease the length of the tows, which is a very serious interruption."

Doctor Marvin's report includes a brief summary and a table of previous droughts in 1881, 1894, 1901, 1911, 1916, and 1924. The abnormal conditions of 1930 cannot be explained as to their cause.

Milk-Drying Plant Profitable

MILK-DRYING plants are profitable industries and a great aid to the farmers.

In a letter to the Brainerd Dispatch, P. B. Nettleton, now at Seattle, writes:

"I enclose a clipping from the Seattle Times which carries a cut and brief mention of a modern dairy building showing a milk drying plant of the Lower California Cooperative Dairy Association recently dedicated at Grays River Valley and the Naselle Valley in Pacific county, Washington.

"It seems to be a great success. As it was entirely new to me, I thought it might interest the progressive farmers of Crow Wing county, Minnesota. As it may have a future before it, I thought some wide awake progressive farmers might think best to try it out in Brainerd. I would be very glad if it should be a help to them."

The Grays River creamery is one of the original units of the Lower Columbia Cooperative Dairy Association. Farmers heretofore have been raising calves and hogs with their skim milk after delivering their cream to the creamery. They now have abandoned hog raising and are raising their calves on "calves' meal." The new drying plant cost $50,000. It is of reinforced concrete, 70 by 90, and its equipment is the latest type for milk drying plants. Its capacity is 270 pounds of dried milk per hour.

Nature Keeps Books

THE Modern Woodmen magazine, in commenting on an article of Dr. Theodore B. Appel, secretary of health in the State of Pennsylvania, notes that Nature keeps books. No matter how careless the individual may become in regard to his health, nature is never careless.

And there is always a day of reckoning. To stay up habitually until all hours of the night, to indulge in enervating excesses, to use stimulants inordinately, and, in short, to disregard the cost of improper living habits, is to take the road to physical impairment and shortened life.

Therefore one should weigh well the cost of his habits and general method of living. He should make of life what it is, a glorious adventure based upon vital and intelligent living. One should always keep books on his life and keep them straight. Only in this way can he hope for the profit which is his just due.

THE length of life is increasing. But what good are the extra years if the individual becomes encrusted in a shell and loses interest in the world.

Young, Beautiful—and Alone

Ardeth Carroll was young, beautiful and popular; but in her heart there was only loneliness, for the man she loved was not hers. Unkind fate had cut short her romance and sent the symbol of her happiness to the altar with a woman he didn't love. ALL-AMERICA FOOTBALL TEAM FOR 1930 IS DESIGNATED

IS SELECTED BY UNITED PRESS AND COACHES

NOTRE DAME ROUGH RIDERS CLOSE GREAT YEAR

FIRST TEAM GIVES HONORS TO PLAYERS FROM EAST, MID-WEST, SOUTH, FAR WEST

CHOICES NOT OF ARBITRARY DESIGN, BUT EVOLVED AFTER CAREFUL CONSIDERATION

By L. S. CAMERON
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

New York, Dec. 8.—The All-America football team for 1930, selected by the United Press sports staff in collaboration with leading coaches in every section of the country, was announced today.

The first team gives honors to players from east, midwest, south and far west. These choices were not of arbitrary design, but evolved out of a careful consideration of the claims put forward by football experts who have watched the players in their season of strenuous play.

It seems fitting at the outset of the All-America announcement to explain that while the choices were made honestly and after a great deal of study, the United Press attaches no great significance to any choice. After all, it is at best a guess, for it is impossible for any football reporter or coach to see every player in every game, or even to see every player in as many as two games of a given season.

The United Press acknowledges with thanks the valuable assistance given by football coaches in making these selections. Since some of the coaches wished to be anonymous, all of them will remain so. It was interesting to observe how many players of rival teams were selected by the coaches.

Here's the United Press All-America:

L. E.—Wes Fessler, Ohio State.
L. T.—Fred Sington, Alabama.
L. G.—Bert Metzger, Notre Dame.
C.—Ben Ticknor, Harvard.
R. G.—Pete Wisniewski, Fordham.
R. T.—Milo Lubratovich, Wisconsin.
R. E.—Frank Baker, Northwestern.
Q. B.—Frank Carideo, Notre Dame.
R. H.—M. Schwartz, Notre Dame.
P. H.—Phil Moffat, Stanford.
F. B.—Len Macaluso, Colgate.

The easiest choice to make was that of Frank Carideo whose individual brilliance was an important contributing factor to the successful season enjoyed by Notre Dame. He was a unanimous choice of all United Press reporters and was nominated by nearly every one of the dozens of coaches who made All-America selections.

Carideo's ability to select the correct plays, his kicking and defensive work were some of the contributing factors of his success. Carideo was named captain of the mythical team.

Len Macaluso of Colgate was chosen as fullback. This was a good season for fullbacks. There was Russell of Northwestern for one, and Kitzmiller of Oregon State for another. But Macaluso, the leading point-maker of the nation, seemed to have a margin over his rivals. He was a stand-out player on an excellent team.

One of Carideo's mates and chief ball-carrier was placed at left halfback. He is Marchmont Schwartz, whose running ability was equalled only by his passing and defensive work.

The other halfback post was won by Phil Moffat of Stanford. Many a far coast observer believes Moffat to be one of the greatest backs of all time. He was especially brilliant in the Southern California game.

The contest for center was a close one. The honor went to Ben Ticknor of Harvard, who besides being a steady, heady player, was a real leader. The other centers of the year were Siano of Fordham, and Hein of Washington State. Ticknor and Carideo were the only members of the United Press team of 1929 to be chosen again.

Another almost unanimous choice was that of Wesley Fessler of Ohio State as an end. He followed a series of fine performances made in 1929 with another season of sound play. He is held to be the best end the western conference has ever seen. A wizard on defense, he is also a great catcher and thrower of passes, an exceptional punter and a real field general.

The other end position was awarded to Frank Baker of Northwestern, another western conference brilliant who was a good player in all phases of his position and was a surprisingly successful receiver of passes.

Tackle honors were won by Fred Sington of Alabama and Milo Lubratovich of Wisconsin, each of whom was an outstanding player throughout the season. Sington was nominated by many coaches, especially by those against whose teams he played. Lubratovich was held to be the best Big Ten conference lineman, exclusive of the ends, this season.

Bert Metzger of Notre Dame, who was an easy selection for a guard position, was, perhaps, the best lineman of the nation in 1930. He was never outplayed, never forced to take time out, and it was he, as much as Carideo, Schwartz, or Marty Brill who made the long Notre Dame runs possible.

At the other guard is the six-foot-seven giant "Pistol Pete" Wisniewski of Fordham. He seemed able to crush two opponents together or to fling them yards apart. His flail-like arms drove many an opponent into turf, mud or dust.

This is a great team. Whether it could be co-ordinated into the smooth machine that Notre Dame's varsity was, is something no one will ever know. But any coach, were he scheduled to face this team, surely could be headlined as fearing it more than Stagg, in his most cautious days, ever feared Purdue.

Second and third teams and honorable mentions follow:

Second Team
L. E.—Conley, Notre Dame.
L. T.—Culver, Notre Dame.

R. E.—Dalrymple, Tulane.
Q. B.—Dodd, Tennessee.
L. H.—Pinckert, U. S. C.

Spears Denies Reports That He May Leave Oregon University

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 8.—(U.P.)—Reports that Dr. Clarence Spears was not satisfied with his berth as Oregon University football coach and that he was considering an offer to go to the University of California at Berkeley were denied by Spears today.

"My contract with Oregon has a long time to run," Spears said, "and so far as I know I'll be back there."

"However, if Oregon was not satisfied with me I'd allow the contract to be broken and if I was not satisfied I believe Oregon would permit me to break it."

"I'm satisfied, and I expect to be back at Oregon. I know nothing about any offer to me from California."

Spears is here attending the Pacific coast conference annual schedule-making session.

Sinuses

The cells or cavities contained in certain bones, as the frontal, ethmoid, sphenoid and superior maxillary, are called sinuses. The frontal sinuses are two irregular cavities extending upward and outward from their openings on each side of the nasal spine, between the inner and outer layers of the skull, and separated from one another by a thin bony septum. They give rise to the prominences above the root of the nose, called the nasal eminences.

SMASHING WIN OF 27 TO 0 OVER THE TROJAN TEAM

TRIUMPH OVER SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA'S WIDELY HERALDED OFFENSIVE

EVERY VICTORY OF RAMBLERS FOR 2 YEARS OVER A MAJOR ELEVEN

By GEORGE KIRKSEY
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
Los Angeles, Dec. 8.—Leaving a trail of destruction behind them, Notre Dame's rough riders have closed the greatest two-year record in gridiron history.

The Irish climaxed a winning streak of 19 straight victories without a defeat or tie by scoring a smashing 27-0 triumph over Southern California's widely-heralded offensive eleven before 90,000 persons here Saturday.

Although Notre Dame won twenty straight games back in 1919, 1920 and 1921 before meeting defeat, the present streak is more formidable because every victory was over a major eleven without a real setup in the entire group during two seasons of play.

Thrown on the defensive at the outset of the game, Southern California had to fight with its back to the wall throughout a one-sided contest in which Notre Dame dominated in every department of play except punting.

The ball-carrying star of the game was O'Connor, who made 142 yards in the 11 times he carried the ball, averaging 13 yards each time. He gained only six yards less than the entire Southern California team. Schwartz made 94 yards in 12 times he carried the ball. All told, Notre Dame gained 435 yards, 396 on running plays and 39 on passes. Southern California gained 148 yards, 94 from running plays and 54 from passes.

Every Notre Dame player was a star. The brightest of these stars, however, was little Bert Metzger, 153-pound guard who was the greatest lineman on the field, and Carideo, the matchless field general. Metzger's blocking and tackling stood out prominently, and he was seldom taken out of any play. Occasionally the Chicago midget piled up the entire center of the big Southern California line with his submarine dives.

Always driving his team onward, Carideo picked flaws in the Southern California defense with astonishing rapidity and drove through them for long gains. The Notre Dame attack, conserved against Northwestern and Army, was unleashed in all its fury against Southern California.

Marshall Duffield, Southern California quarterback, told the whole story when he said after the game: "We looked like a bunch of green kids against masters of the game."

Los Angeles, Dec. 8.—Notre Dame's undefeated football team drew a total attendance of approximately 559,000 people and gate receipts of about $1,907,000 in ten games during the 1930 season, according to figures compiled today by the United Press.

The crowds at the three final games against Northwestern, Army and Southern California were restricted by the seating capacity of the stadiums. Tickets for the Northwestern and Southern California games were exhausted more than a week before the game.

Twice Notre Dame played to almost half million dollar galleries, approximately 100,000 tickets were sold at $4 to the Army game, and 90,000 tickets were sold at $5 each to the Southern California game. The average price of tickets to the other games was $3. Tickets to the Navy game were $5 but some of the duets to the Pittsburgh and other games were as low as $1.50.

LES CANADIENS WIN FROM AMERICANS, 3-2

By United Press
Les Canadiens, champions of the world, moved into a tie with Toronto for the lead in the international group of the National Hockey league Sunday night by defeating the New York Americans 3 to 2.

The Frenchmen led throughout the game, Jollat scoring near the middle of the first period, and LaRoche getting a goal in the second period. Ayers, American recruit, scored for his team in the second session.

Gagnon and Carson were the third period scorers. The game was bitterly fought and exceedingly rough.

In the only other scheduled game the Chicago Blackhawks strengthened their hold on first place in the American group by defeating Detroit 3 to 2.

Ingram, Blackhawks' forward, scored all his team's goals.

Sorrell and Goodfellow tallied for the losers.

The Week's Big Event

By HARDIN BURNLEY

ON this season's form Army should beat Navy three touchdowns in their great special charity game at New York City tomorrow, but previous performances should be discounted considerably whenever Cadets and Middles clash.

Remember what much-beaten Princeton did to highly-touted Yale a few weeks ago? The Bulldog won, 10-7, but the inspired Tigers came within inches of scoring the year's biggest grid upset. Something of that Old Nassau spirit may move Navy, Saturday, to tear the Army mule limb from limb. Added incentive to do that is the fact that relations between the service academies will be renewed for this year at least after a bitter rupture following their 1927 tie at Chicago. This rift is essentially due to Navy's objection to Army's use of veteran stars from other colleges.

The Middles would make mincemeat of the Mule, Saturday, and how the Cadets will strive to crush our future admirals! Here are germs of bitter battle that are evident without the need of using a microscope.

What "Trix" Bennett was to Princeton in all but tearing Yale asunder, "Bullet Lou" Kirm may be to Navy though Humber, Price, Messenger and the rest of Army's defense, loom as distinctly stronger than their Middy opponents. Captain Humber at guard usually is the spearhead of Army's line plays and he should punch many a hole in Navy's front wall for Herb, Fields, Stecker & Co.

With admissions ranging from $5 to $50 and "deadheads" reduced to an absolute minimum (even Gotham's politicians are paying, believe-it-or-not, this time), Yankee Stadium will be the scene of football's first million-dollar gate, attracting the most distinguished big crowd in U. S. football history.

No matter which wins, Army and Navy will each help toss hard times for a real loss. A million bucks can't shatter the national headline but it will help much to relieve suffering. So, as always—three cheers for the Army and Navy!

The ball-carrying star of the game was O'Connor, who made 142 yards in the 11 times he carried the ball, averaging 13 yards each time. He gained only six yards less than the entire Southern California team. Schwartz made 94 yards in 12 times he carried the ball. All totaled, Notre Dame gained 435 yards, 336 on running plays and 99 on passes. Southern California gained 148 yards, 94 from running plays and 54 from passes.

Every Notre Dame player was a star. The brightest of these stars, however, was little Bert Metzger, 153-pound guard who was the greatest lineman on the field, and Carideo, the matchless field general. Metzger's blocking and tackling stood out prominently, and he was seldom taken out of any play. Occasionally the Chicago midget piled up the entire center of the big Southern California line with his submarine dives.

Always driving his team onward, Carideo picked flaws in the Southern California defense with astonishing rapidity and drove through them for long gains. The Notre Dame attack, conserved against Northwestern and Army, was unleashed in all its fury against Southern California.

Marshall Duffield, Southern California quarterback, told the whole story when he said after the game: "We looked like a bunch of green kids against masters of the game."

Los Angeles, Dec. 8.—Notre Dame's undefeated football team drew a total attendance of approximately 539,000 people and gate receipts of about $1,937,000 in ten games during the 1930 season, according to figures compiled today by the United Press.

The crowds at the three final games against Northwestern, Army and Southern California were restricted by the seating capacity of the stadiums. Tickets for the Northwestern and Southern California games were exhausted more than a week before the game.

Twice Notre Dame played to almost half million dollar galleries, approximately 100,000 tickets were sold at $4 to the Army game, and 90,000 tickets were sold at $5 each to the Southern California game. The average price of tickets to the other games was $2. Tickets to the Navy game were $5 but some of the duets to the Pittsburgh and other games were as low as $1.50.

LES CANADIENS WIN
FROM AMERICANS, 3-2

By United Press
Les Canadiens, champions of the world, moved into a tie with Toronto for the lead in the international group of the National Hockey league Sunday night by defeating the New York Americans 3 to 2.

The Frenchmen led throughout the game, Joliat scoring near the middle of the first period, and LaRoche getting a goal in the second period. Ayers, American recruit, scored for his team in the second session.

Gagnon and Carson were the third period scorers. The game was bitterly fought and exceedingly rough.

In the only other scheduled game the Chicago Blackhawks strengthened their hold on first place in the American group by defeating Detroit 3 to 2. Ingram, Blackhawks' forward, scored all his team's goals.

Sorell and Goodfellow tallied for the losers.

NOTRE DAME WINS NATIONAL TITLE

By conquering the University of Southern California, Knute Rockne's great team of Notre Dame clinched its claim to the national football title. The victory was the tenth straight for the Notre Dame team this season, and its nineteenth consecutive win without a defeat. The game was witnessed by 88,000 fans, who jammed every vantage point in the Coliseum. Photo shows the Notre Dame players smashing their way through the California line. Final score; Notre Dame, 27; University of Southern California, 0.

ON this season's form Army should beat Navy three touchdowns in their great special charity game at New York City tomorrow, but previous performances should be discounted considerably whenever Cadets and Middles clash.

Remember what much-beaten Princeton did to highly-louted Yale a few weeks ago? The Bulldog won, 10-7, but the inspired Tigers came within inches of scoring the year's biggest grid upset. Something of that Old Nassau spirit may move Navy, Saturday, to tear the Army mule limb from limb. Added incentive to do that is the fact that relations between the service academies will be renewed for this year at least after a bitter rupture following their 1927 tie at Chicago. This rift is essentially due to Navy's objection to Army's use of veteran stars from other colleges.

The Middles would make mince-meat of the Mule, Saturday—and how the Cadets will strive to crush our future admirals! Here are germs of bitter battle that are evident without the need of using a microscope.

What "Trix" Bennett was to Princeton in all but tearing Yale asunder, "Bullet Lou" Kirm may be to Navy though Humber, Price, Messenger and the rest of Army's defense, loom as distinctly stronger than their Middy opponents. Captain Humber at guard usually is the spearhead of Army's line plays and he should punch many a hole in Navy's front wall for Herb, Fields, Stecker & Co.

With admissions ranging from $5 to $50 and "deadheads" reduced to an absolute minimum (even Gotham's politicians are paying, believe-it-or-not, this time), Yankee Stadium will be the scene of football's first million-dollar gate, attracting the most distinguished big crowd in U. S. football history.

No matter which wins, Army and Navy will each help toss hard times for a real loss. A million bucks can't shatter the national breadline, but it will help much to relieve suffering. So, as always—three cheers for the Army and Navy!

MURDER CHARGES AGAINST PRISONER AT MOORHEAD

RAYMOND P. LARSON CAPTURED
AFTER A RUNNING GUN
FIGHT

ONE PATROLMAN KILLED IN
MELEE, DEPUTY SHERIFF WOUNDED

Moorhead, Minn., Dec. 8.—(U.P.)—First degree murder charges today were placed against Raymond P. Larson, Detroit, Mich., captured after a running gunfight in which a patrolman was killed and another wounded.

Funeral services for Roy E. Larson, patrolman killed in the melee, were prepared today while word came from the hospital that Peter McArthur, of Fargo, N. D., deputy sheriff, was recovering from his wounds.

New windows were fitted to store fronts today where ricocheting bullets struck the glass.

The gun fight ensued when Moorhead police sought to arrest Larson for the holdup of a Fargo grocery store Saturday morning.

After the holdup, in which $13 was taken, Bert Sundt and Oscar Schroeder, grocery employees, trailed the bandit in a taxi. McArthur, with "Bud" Davis, trusty at the Cass county jail, heard of the holdup and also gave chase.

The rapidly forming posse followed the bandit to a Moorhead cigar store. As a crowd gathered, the man came from the store, shooting as he ran. The first bullet struck down McArthur, but Davis took his gun and fired several times at the bandit.

Meanwhile Chief of Police Peter E. Mlavey received word of the shooting and came to the scene.

Through the crowded street, police and bandit traded shots. Bullets struck windows and narrowly missed bystanders.

Patrolman Larson was killed after the bandit took cover in a nearby lumber yard. He leaned around a box-car looking for the man and was struck by two bullets. He died within a few moments at the hospital.

The bandit then shot himself. The shot entered his head, just back of the right ear, but was not considered serious by hospital authorities.

Larson said he did not want his relatives to know of the event, and at first gave a false name. Later, he told his true name and said he was born July 9, 1901, at Oshkosh, Wis.

Pawnee, Okla., Dec. 8.—Jess Powell, 65-year-old farmer and alleged killer of a deputy sheriff and an 18-year-old boy, was captured at Ralston, Okla., today after a gun battle in which Assistant County Attorney Lewis Raba was shot three times.

Raba, who was a member of the posse seeking Powell, may not live, Sheriff Allen Jones said.

Search for Powell started after he was reported to have killed Ed Hartwick, Pawnee county under-sheriff, who had gone to his farm to arrest him for the slaying of Floyd Bell, 18, and the serious wounding of his companion, Marion Kendall, 20.

Powell was said to have shot the two boys without warning when they went to his farm yesterday to return a log chain borrowed several days before.

Hartwick was notified of the shooting. He went to the farm immediately after and was slain from ambush, Sheriff Jones said.

A posse was organized and search was started for Powell.

Early today word was received at the sheriff's office here that Powell was in Ralston.

The posse immediately went there. Powell was standing on a sidewalk in the business district. He allowed the members of the posse to approach him, indicating he wished to surrender, Jones said.

As soon as the first member of the

Remorse

Virgil Kirkland, one of the five youths held in the attack and killing of Arlene Draves, Gary, Ind., girl, sobs in his cell as he recalls the drinking party that ended in the girl's death.

posse reached him, Powell started shooting, wounding Rata seriously, according to Jones.

Powell was held in the Pawnee county jail today. Murder charges will be filed against him, Sheriff Jones said.

Famous Makers of "Comics"

The remote ancestry of the American comic world would include the figures of "The Rake's Progress" and "Marriage à la Mode" of Hogarth, the work of Rowlandson and Cruikshank and the "Robert Macaire" of Daumier and Philippon. The indigenous product first found expression in the back pages of the American magazines of the later half of the Nineteenth century. Examples of this early work were Palmer Cox's "The Brownies" and the sketches of A. B. Frost. It was in the '90s that the comic serial found its way into the newspapers. "The Yellow Kid," a creation of that decade, contributed to the coinage of the term "yellow journalism." "The Yellow Kid" is generally credited to R. F. Outcault, who was the originator of "Buster Brown." Frederick Burr Oppen, E. M. Haworth, T. E. Powers, Gene Carr, creator of "Lady Bountiful," and Carl Schultz, creator of "Foxy Grandpa," were other outstanding comic artists of the period.

Dickens, the Aristocrat

No little consternation will be caused among the admirers of Charles Dickens, who have always regarded him as an out-and-out Democrat, a lover of common things and simple people, by the discovery that in the later years of his life he adopted an imposing armorial device to which he had no hereditary or legal right. Was it snobbery or merely whimsical fancy that induced him to embellish his entire library with a crest, depicting a lion holding in its paws a Maltese cross? Perhaps the noble crest on his dinner service helped him to forget the labels on those interminable rows of blacking bottles at Hungerford market. Dickens' crest remains Dickens' secret.—London Morning Post.

Important Word Omitted

The so-called "Wicked Bible" refers to an edition of the Bible, printed in 1631, in which the word "not" is omitted from the Seventh commandment. A copy survives in the Bodleian.

Women and Hats

The subject of women and their hats is one that apparently never will be cleared up to mere man. "My wife," said a well dressed attorney, "must have a hat complex. She calls me at the office and exclaims over a hat. 'It's gorgeous. I want it so much. You don't care if I get it, do you?' she asks, and weakening, I give in. That night right when I expect to see her in fine spirits because of the gorgeous hat, she is depressed. Inquiry reveals that on the way home she decided it wasn't the hat for her. She won't take it back and she won't wear it. I'll bet there are 25 hats of hers in our house this minute, and to hear her talk she hasn't a hat to her name. I can't understand it."—Detroit News.

"City of Spires"

There are so many fine spires and towers on the churches and palaces in Copenhagen that it has been described as the "City of Spires." Although it is an ancient city, Copenhagen is now modern in appearance. The earlier houses built of wood were destroyed by fire in the Eighteenth century and have been replaced with brick and stone buildings. Copenhagen is noted for its beautiful parks and gardens, among which the most famous are the Tivoli gardens, laid out in 1843. At night they are lighted with thousands of fairy lights and the theaters, restaurants, concert and dance halls in it offer countless attractions. Indeed, one could easily call it "Denmark's Fairyland."

Old Massachusetts Church

Hingham, Mass., possesses an extraordinary number of old buildings, but the Old Ship church is by far the most interesting of them all, says an article in the Boston Post. It is not an exaggeration to say that it ranks, without any qualifications, among the few most interesting historic buildings in the country. It was built in 1681, the second church in the town. It has been enlarged twice, but the original building is still there. Competent authorities say that it is "the oldest house for public worship in the United States which stands upon its original site and continues to be used for the purpose for which it was erected."

New windows were fitted to store fronts today where ricocheting bullets struck the glass.

The gun fight ensued when Moorhead police sought to arrest Larson for the holdup of a Fargo grocery store Saturday morning.

After the holdup, in which $13 was taken, Bert Sundt and Oscar Schroeder, grocery employees, trailed the bandit in a taxi. McArthur, with "Bud" Davis, trusty at the Cass county jail, heard of the holdup and also gave chase.

The rapidly forming posse followed the bandit to a Moorhead cigar store. As a crowd gathered, the man came from the store, shooting as he ran. The first bullet struck down McArthur, but Davis took his gun and fired several times at the bandit.

Meanwhile Chief of Police Peter E. Mayave received word of the shooting and came to the scene.

Through the crowded street, police and bandit traded shots. Bullets struck windows and narrowly missed bystanders.

Patrolman Larson was killed after the bandit took cover in a nearby lumber yard. He leaned around a box-car looking for the man and was struck by two bullets. He died within a few moments at the hospital.

The bandit then shot himself. The shot entered his head, just back of the right ear, but was not considered serious by hospital authorities.

Larson said he did not want his relatives to know of the event, and at first gave a false name. Later, he told his true name and said he was born July 9, 1901, at Oshkosh, Wis.

Pawnee, Okla., Dec. 8.—Jess Powell, 65-year-old farmer and alleged killer of a deputy sheriff and an 18-year-old boy, was captured at Ralson, Okla., today after a gun battle in which Assistant County Attorney Lewis Raba was shot three times.

Raba, who was a member of the posse seeking Powell, may not live, Sheriff Allen Jones said.

Search for Powell started after he was reported to have killed Ed Hartwick, Pawnee county under-sheriff, who had gone to his farm to arrest him for the slaying of Floyd Bell, 18, and the serious wounding of his companion, Marion Kendall, 20.

Powell was said to have shot the two boys without warning when they went to his farm yesterday to return a log chain borrowed several days before.

Hartwick was notified of the shooting. He went to the farm immediately after and was slain from ambush, Sheriff Jones said.

A posse was organized and search was started for Powell.

Early today word was received at the sheriff's office here that Powell was in Ralston.

The posse immediately went there.

Powell was standing on a sidewalk in the business district. He allowed the members of the posse to approach him, indicating he wished to surrender, Jones said.

As soon as the first member of the

Remorse

posse reached him, Powell started shooting, wounding Rata seriously, according to Jones.

Powell was held in the Pawnee county jail today. Murder charges will be filed against him, Sheriff Jones said.

Famous Makers of "Comics"

The remote ancestry of the American serial comic would include the figures of "The Rake's Progress" and "Marriage à la Mode" of Hogarth, the work of Rowlandson and Cruikshank and the "Robert Macaire" of Daumier and Philippon. The indigenous product first found expression in the back pages of the American magazines of the later half of the Nineteenth century. Examples of this early work were Palmer Cox's "The Brownies" and the sketches of A. B. Frost. It was in the '90s that the comic serial found its way into the newspapers.

"The Yellow Kid," a creation of that decade, contributed to the coinage of the term "yellow journalism." "The Yellow Kid" is generally credited to R. F. Outcault, who was the originator of "Buster Brown." Frederick Burr Oppen, E. M. Haworth, T. E. Powers, Gene Carr, creator of "Lady Bountiful," and Carl Schultz, creator of "Foxy Grandpa," were other outstanding comic artists of the period.

Dickens, the Aristocrat

No little consternation will be caused among the admirers of Charles Dickens, who have always regarded him as an out-and-out Democrat, a lover of common things and simple people, by the discovery that in the later years of his life he adopted an imposing armorial device to which he had no hereditary or legal right. Was it snobbery or merely whimsical fancy that induced him to embellish his entire library with a crest, depicting a lion holding in its paws a Maltese cross? Perhaps the noble crest on his dinner service helped him to forget the labels on those interminable rows of blacking bottles at Hungerford market. Dickens' crest remains Dickens' secret.—London Morning Post.

Important Word Omitted

The so-called "Wicked Bible" refers to an edition of the Bible, printed in 1631, in which the word "not" is omitted from the Seventh commandment. A copy survives in the Bodleian.

Women and Hats

The subject of women and their hats is one that apparently never will be cleared up to mere man. "My wife," said a well dressed attorney, "must have a hat complex. She calls me at the office and exclaims over a hat. 'It's gorgeous. I want it so much. You don't care if I get it, do you?' She asks, and weakening, I give in. That night right when I expect to see her in fine spirits because of the gorgeous hat, she is depressed. Inquiry reveals that on the way home she decided it wasn't the hat for her. She won't take it back and she won't wear it. I'll bet there are 25 hats of hers in our house this minute, and to hear her talk she hasn't a hat to her name. I can't understand it."—Detroit News.

"City of Spires"

There are so many fine spires and towers on the churches and palaces in Copenhagen that it has been described as the "City of Spires." Although it is an ancient city, Copenhagen is now modern in appearance. The earlier houses built of wood were destroyed by fire in the Eighteenth century and have been replaced with brick and stone buildings. Copenhagen is noted for its beautiful parks and gardens, among which the most famous are the Tivoli gardens, laid out in 1843. At night they are lighted with thousands of fairy lights and the theaters, restaurants, concert and dance halls in it offer countless attractions. Indeed, one could easily call it "Denmark's Fairland."

Old Massachusetts Church

Hingham, Mass., possesses an extraordinary number of old buildings, but the Old Ship church is by far the most interesting of them all, says an article in the Boston Post. It is not an exaggeration to say that it ranks, without any qualifications, among the few most interesting historic buildings in the country. It was built in 1681, the second church in the town. It has been enlarged twice, but the original building is still there. Competent authorities say that it is "the oldest house for public worship in the United States which stands upon its original site and continues to be used for the purpose for which it was erected."

PAIR CAPTURED IN OIL STATION ENTRY

Edward Quirk, George Sundberg Surrender to Officers Sande and Brandt

BREAK IN HOME OIL STATION Officers Surprise Pair When Tipped Off "That Drunks Were Fooling Around Place"

Two youthful amateur burglars were captured in the coal bin of the basement of the Home Oil Co., corner of Broadway and Maple shortly after 10 p. m. Sunday after they had opened the oil station safe and found nothing in it.

Crouching in the shadows of the basement the two, Edward Quirk, 20, East Oak street and George Sundberg, 18, East Pine street, surrendered to Officers H. B. Sande and Frank Brandt who covered them with guns.

The youths were taken to police headquarters, admitted the break-in and were being questioned again today before formal charges were placed against them regarding other burglaries in the city.

An empty .32 calibre revolver and an empty bottle which smelled of liquor were taken from Sundberg, police reported.

Both stated they had been drinking, police further reported.

Officers Sande and Brandt went to the Home Oil Station, owned and operated by W. G. Nubbe, on a telephone call that "two drunks were fooling around the place." They flashed lights on the station, saw the window of the front door broken where the pair had apparently made their entry, then entered to hear a scuffling in the basement of the station. The officers pulled their guns and ordered the two to come out.

SUB ADVISORY HEALTH BOARDS ARE ORGANIZED

The county nurse's narrative report for October and November as submitted by Miss Caroline Walz follows:

Preventive

24 schools were inspected. 394 children had their physical inspection.

32 talks were given to school children.

91 homes were visited. 160 visits were made, including communicable diseases, nursing, demonstration and business calls.

Clinics

Four tuberculosis clinics were held. Seventeen people were examined and the necessary advice was given by the doctor.

Educational

A class in Home Hygiene completed its course and those who were eligible took the final examinations. Thirty-two members of the three classes under instructions during the summer and fall have been awarded with Red Cross certificates. One class called a meeting and made the presentation of certificates a special occasion.

Five class meetings were held. 369 pieces of health literature were distributed.

The last home visits in regard to the National Survey on the "Cost of Medical Care" have been made. As soon as the final check on these records has been completed they will be sent to Washington, D. C.

A large number of magazines and some books have been distributed. Old magazines will always be appreciated. Kindly leave them at the county nurse's office.

Again the books on Health Habits are available. They are being loaned to the school districts who wish to make use of this opportunity.

Six Sub-Advisory Boards have been organized. All boards have had their first business meeting with election of officers. A general program of observation has been adopted for the coming three months.

Public Health meetings were attended at Minneapolis. The talks given by Dr. Jacobs of New York and Mrs. Hodgson, assistant director of the N. O. P. H. N., at the tuberculosis institute were educational as well as very interesting.

Remedial

Two children were accompanied to the tuberculosis clinic.

By request a patient was returned to the University Dispensary for treatment.

A patient was returned from the Gillette State Hospital for Crippled Children.

Four others, one a bad case of osteomyelitis, another a recent Infantile Paralysis case, a small baby with a club foot and a four year old girl in need of new braces were taken to the State Hospital.

By request a two year old child was returned to the Eustis hospital for treatment.

Another patient, very much in need of hospital care, was sent to the University hospital.

Crow Wing county is each year losing valuable lives from tuberculosis, now known to be a curable disease if discovered early, despite the declining death rate. A report from the Minnesota Public Health Association issued in connection with the Christmas Seal sale states that a study of State Board of Health records reveals that 16 Crow Wing county residents were victims in 1929. This number does not include any out-of-county persons who died here.

"Records of tuberculosis deaths throughout Minnesota show that a total of 42,932 men, women and children have been victims since 1909," the report states.

"Only eight states in the nation have a lower death rate than Minnesota, which has a rate of 56.71 per 100,000 as compared to Nebraska's 25.5, the lowest in the country, and the 79.2 average for the United States registration area; a total of 90,600 people, more than one-third as many as the total deaths of American soldiers in the world war, died of tuberculosis in the United States in 1929."

"Tuberculosis still ranks first as a cause of death in those important years from 15 to 45," continues the bulletin. "Like war, this disease takes citizens when they are of the most value to the state and their families. There is sufficient knowledge at hand at the present time to bring the disease under control. Christmas Seals extend this knowledge everywhere and carry on a campaign for its application for the prevention and cure of tuberculosis."

REOPENING OF LAKES PROMISED

A. M. Opsahl's Efforts to Bring About Rescinding of Order Successful

A. M. Opsahl, representative in the state legislature from Crow Wing county, today asserted that because of reports coming to him that he was in some way responsible for the closing of several lakes in the county to spearing this winter he desired to take the stand that he was in no way a party to it.

"I am not in favor of closing any of the lakes in Crow Wing county to spearing or the use of fish houses. On the contrary I prefer seeing them all open according to law and shall use my influence in bringing this about," Mr. Opsahl stated.

In reply to a letter in which Mr. Opsahl explained to George McCullough, state game and fish commissioner, his views on this subject, he was assured by the commissioner that the order closing some of the lakes would be rescinded.

An order opening those lakes closed will in all likelihood be received this week, Mr. Opsahl said.

The origin of the custom of carrying a flag at the stern of a ship is obscure. Several theories have been advanced, one of the most substantial being that in the case of old vessels the flag was flown over the captain's quarters, which are aft on board ship.

Opsahl, representative in the state legislature from Crow Wing county, today asserted that because of reports coming to him that he was in some way responsible for the closing of several lakes in the county to spearing this winter he desired to take the stand that he was in no way a party to it.

"I am not in favor of closing any of the lakes in Crow Wing county to spearing or the use of fish houses. On the contrary I prefer seeing them all open according to law and shall use my influence in bringing this about," Mr. Opsahl stated.

In reply to a letter in which Mr. Opsahl explained to George McCullough, state game and fish commissioner, his views on this subject, he was assured by the commissioner that the order closing some of the lakes would be rescinded.

An order opening those lakes closed will in all likelihood be received this week, Mr. Opsahl said.

Flag at Vessel's Stern

The origin of the custom of carrying a flag at the stern of a ship is obscure. Several theories have been advanced, one of the most substantial being that in the case of old vessels the flag was flown over the captain's quarters, which are aft on board ship.

"JUDY" By Winifred Van Duzer

Judy Refuses Tris' Offer Of Marriage.

CHAPTER XL.

PEGGY came in, fluttered before the mirror, asked if she should stay.

"You're not ill, lamb? Or afraid? It's a little rough."

A little rough? It would seem so perhaps if you were dreadfully in love.

"Run along, ol' darling. Your only child is doing some heavy thinking at the moment. Give my regards to Donald."

Judy dear, you're not minding?—why, I'd call it off—

"Lovely goose. Wouldn't miss you or having him in the family for anything. All I'm worried about is what I'll wear to the masquerade the last night out, if any."

"Well, if you're all right. . . . I left him fuming in the lounge."

Judy, it's wonderful, having someone take care of you."

"It would be," retorted Judy in a small way voice. "I'll not wait up for you. Bye."

She continued to be there while faces events, incidents flashed like disconnected pictures across the screen of her mind. Halifax—Tris sauntering along the narrow path while she stood at the fountain, turning into the lane. The shot—Birke running away, crouching low, the scar livid across his cheek.

Tris coming up the street afterward, moving in his carefree way, turning to raise his hat after he had passed her.

Tris in the deck chair next to hers, stooping to pick up broken bits of glass and tortoise shell. Tris in Notre Dame, head on his arms, while Birke watched from the shadows.

What was the mystery about Tris?

They had not caught the sailor who deserted at Quebec. Cap'n Charley had confided this. Judy knew that Cap'n Charley connected Tris with the man's disappearance, as did Birke.

But why would Tris want him to go away? Tris had called him a rat; in a moment of blind rage he had threatened to "get" the man.

And Kit Camp knew whatever there was to know. Why were they so sure that Kit Camp had no dealings with the sailor? Kit was as mysterious as Tris.

After a time Judy got up. She had to hold to things in order to stand—the bed, the wall—until she discovered that by swaying with the pitching of the ship she could get on fairly well.

With her manicure scissors she ripped the cuff of the evening wrap in which she had hid the silver necklet—drew the necklet through the opening.

"She found Tris in the smoking room. I've got to talk with you—alone. There must be some place."

But there was no corner not already occupied. "If you wouldn't mind turning slightly unconventional, Judy? Everybody's in and out of staterooms and we could leave the door ajar."

"Why, of course, Tris. We must have a minute."

So they went to his stateroom. And she faced him, trying to smile, shrinking from the hurt she was to give.

She did not know what to say. With Tris standing there, regarding her gravely, his dark eyes full of soft light, she could think of no words to express all the things she felt. Her warm delight in him never would be love; her joy in the happiness they had together; the ache his absence would leave.

In the end she held out the necklet, said quickly, a catch in her voice: "Here—I have to give this back. Oh, I'm sorry! It couldn't have been anything but 'no,' Tris. Not ever. But I didn't understand till tonight."

He caught her hands together, held them against his heart in the old, sweetly familiar way. "Little sweet—my little sweet. It couldn't have been? No, I suppose not."

He was very white and his mouth was drawn. "I suppose I knew this from the beginning. Knew I shouldn't ask you—chap like me—"

She put her arms around him, clung to him with tears salt on her lips. "Don't, Tris—it isn't that. You're wonderful! It's only that I don't love you—not this way. Not enough, Tris."

He kept smoothing her hair, pressing his lips to her temple. "But, you're not sure . . . not sure?"

"Oh, I am! Yes—oh, yes."

"Judy, do this," he pleaded. "Wait till we're back in New York. Two more days—not much to ask. A few hours. Perhaps you'll feel differently in two days."

She never would feel differently about Tris. No slightest shadow of a doubt about that. Yet it was a small thing he asked of her.

"Tris, dear," she said softly, "you'll not be disappointed if everything is the same as now? Well then—well then?"

He would not take the necklet. "Wear it, Judy. Keep it till we land. Makes me happy, to know you have something of mine."

He fastened the clasp at her throat, pulled up her scarf and knotted this under her chin. "Beautiful Judith—beautiful sweet—"

His eyes were shadowed. Yet in a clear flash of understanding Judy knew that the pain would vanish quickly; in the debonair eagerness with which Tris and life walked their merry way together there was no place for more than fleeting sadness.

When she left he would know a moment of heart-ache; but very soon she would be to him just a girl he once had loved.

Perhaps no love in days to come—for Tris would love many times again!—would be to him what this had been. Perhaps he would set it apart in his thought like a holy thing. But after the first pang he would think of it with only a dim sadness, like something sweet and vanishing as vaguely remembered music.

There was no dancing tonight, since the ballroom floor slanted at an angle which made dancing impractical, if not impossible. Most of the passengers remained in their staterooms, though a few twosomes were scattered about in retired corners of lounge rooms.

Judy did not wish to spend her evenings in this manner with Tris. She was too shaken, too confused.

"Good-by till morning, Tris. No—don't come with me. Don't mind too much dear—my dearest—"

He swept her in his arms, kissed her with a lingering tenderness. He let her go without speaking at all, standing with his head bowed, dark eyes watching her, loving her.

Judy stepped quickly into the passageway, paused a moment to wipe the tears from her eyes. There was a little strip of mirror at an angle of the wall. It gave back to her the end of the corridor which was out of range of her direct vision. She steadied herself against the lurch of the ship—stared into the glass at the reflected figures of Mr. Birke and Kit Camp.

Kit Pleads With Judy to Give Up Tris.

They were loitering in the music room just beyond the passageway, standing there as if waiting.

Nevertheless, when she came around the bend of the wall they were gone, and she found the music room quite empty.

She felt the clutch of hot anger. Spying on her, were they? Because she ventured into Tris' stateroom for a minute—everybody on the ship was in and out of staterooms just as Tris had said . . . Let Birke ask her any more questions, she thought furiously. She wished she never had spoken to Birke, old snooping thing!

When she found Kit Camp at the head of the companionway obviously waiting for her, her anger with Birke flared against him instead. It did not matter that only a little while ago she had gone rushing to find him, sitting with him at the vision of threatening danger.

She was unreasonable, unapologetic, as she surveyed him with bold hostility, murmured icily, "Well?"

He was in a hurry, too preoccupied to notice her moods as he spoke all in a rush: "Judy—I can't see this happen—can't see you going into this. . . . Do something, won't you? Drop Millet. Right now, Judy—don't see him again at all. Do this, Judy—please—"

"And why," she demanded in a tense, frozen tone, "am I to do that?"

"Why, Judy?" Surprise crossed his eyes. He put his hand on her arm—wincing when she snook it off. "I can't tell you that, Judy—not now."

"I thought not," she said clearly, contempt straightening her lips. "I didn't think you could tell me that."

"But Judy—can't you understand? It's all so plain—"

"Some things," she answered, "are plain. Too plain. If you've anything against Mr. Millet, tell me now. I'll not say it to his face? Unless, of course—"

He interrupted hotly, "Good lord! You don't think—but you can't! I must hear wrong—"

"Your hearing," Judy stated, "is quite all right I should judge. And now if you'll excuse me—"

He gave her a long look, bowed and turned away without a word.

The end of Kit Camp. No more of his high-handedness. This was the final indignity, for him to come rushing to her demanding that she give up her friendship for Tris. Unbelievable that she should do that!

Yet Judy's anger cooled after a time. And then she wished that she had not been so hasty, that at least she had listened to what Kit Camp might have had to say. Of course he had not intended to break her associations with Tris in a treacherous way—how could she have let him think she suspected such a thing?

There began to steal upon her the conviction that she had been more than a bit of a little fool.

Too late now. She had lost Kit Camp's friendship for all time—and it served her right. Never, never would she forget the look he had turned upon her—the hurt in his look.

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

A Reward of Thrift

By EUDORA R. RICHARDSON

(Copyright)

ELIZABETH McBRIDE stared vacantly into space. In her lap lay the letter telling of the loss of her savings. Only two thousand could be salvaged. For twenty years Miss Lizzie had taught in the public schools, hoarding against the day when she would no longer be able to draw her monthly pay check.

Suddenly Lizzie had a new and daring thought. Two thousand dollars on interest would yield nothing worth considering. Spent right away, it might give a great deal of happiness to the woman who had never taken pleasure from life.

Half an hour later Lizzie McBride presented herself at the window of the local bank. Everyone was as usual polite to her, but she longed to be greeted as a person of importance. She admired Carl Bristow, the cashier, who had married her cousin Mary Thompson and buried his wife many years before.

"I want to place this two thousand dollars on my checking account," Miss Lizzie said seriously. "I may need all of it soon."

Carl Bristow looked up from the batch of bills he was thumbing. "Good Lord!" he gasped.

Lizzie slipped out of the bank, pleasantly aware that she had aroused a man's curiosity and interest. That night in her bare little room she reviewed with thrill the events of the day. A new hat, flapperish in its gayety, sat upon the bed. Sheer silk underwear obscured the whiteness of the pillows. Silly, buckled slippers perched upon the bureau, and new frocks littered chairs and chest.

Miss Lizzie loosened the prim coil and let her hair fall about her shoulders. Looking upon her reflection in the glass, she flushed. Indeed, with a new interest, she was almost pretty. She smeared powder over the few crow's feet at the corners of her eyes, arranged her hair experimentally and slipped into the most sumptuous of her dresses.

There was an insistent clang of the brass knocker. In terror Lizzie McBride realized that she must run down and answer the summons in the new and daring outfit. Cheeks still abnormally hot, she swung the door open, and Carl Bristow entered. When Lizzie beheld his perplexed countenance she laughed outright, and there was a note in her voice that sounded even to her more like twenty than forty.

"I hear you've been doing a deal of buying," he began. "I reckon it's my duty to give you a bit of good advice."

In a twinkling the illusion of youth had vanished. Miss Lizzie, sitting quite erect, looked her guest in the eye.

"Have my notions in the past led you to think 'the sort of woman who would spend beyond my means?' she asked directly.

The man shook his head.

"Then perhaps I've been left money," she smiled and quickly changed the subject.

During the next few days Miss Lizzie began to realize that a new attitude toward her was the most delightful aftermath of her extravagances. There were social invitations that had never come before. She had become a personage at last. Indeed Lizzie wondered how she had happened ever to suffer from an inferiority complex. From Carl Bristow's attentions, moreover, came the real thrill.

For when one evening there came a party invitation accompanied by a summons that Mr. Bristow would call for her, Lizzie did not feel the lack of any youthful emotion.

"Lizzie," Carl said on the way home, slipping his hand to cover hers, "you are mighty pretty tonight. I never thought that money could make such a difference in a woman. I've always liked you, but I didn't know till recently that my feelings go a whole lot deeper than liking."

For a moment Lizzie's head reeled. Carl Bristow was making love to her. She would not have to be drab Miss Lizzie any longer. Then the man's first words came back with poignant agony. Money surely made the difference.

"Oh, I'm a fool!" she burst forth. "A fool! I have no money. I've been spending all I had to get some of the things I've wanted all these years. I'm penniless now."

But Carl's arms were encircling her, her face was being turned toward him.

"Lizzie," the man said huskily, "you didn't think I loved you for the money you hinted was yours, did you? I meant that the money that bought the pretty clothes made me see how pretty you really are. I love you."

"Love me, when I have, deceived you and the whole town?"

"You may have deceived the town, but you didn't deceive me. I heard about your losing your money, and I came up to talk it over with you that night you met me at the door looking so pretty that I wanted to take you in my arms at once. I knew you were bluffing, and I loved you for being so brave. Will you marry me, Lizzie?"

Lizzie buried her face against the nice roughness of the man's coat and left it there. She was thinking how strangely fate works to bring about its miracles.
